

Adams Man Drowns in Plainfield Pond

William Lubowicz, 34, Victim; Teen-Agers' Rescue Efforts Fail

PLAINFIELD — A 34-year-old Adams man drowned Monday night shortly before 8 when his canoe capsized on Plainfield Pond on Route 116. Efforts of a teen-ager to revive him were in vain.

Canoe Capsizes

The victim was identified as William Lubowicz of 33 Upton St. At a late hour First Hampshire District Medical Examiner Dr. Thomas F. Corridan of Northampton, who was at the scene, could not be reached for exact cause of death.

Lubowicz reportedly was paddling about 200 feet from shore when his canoe capsized as he apparently reached for something either in the boat or the water. The water was said to be eight feet deep at that point.

Two unidentified fishermen in a boat near Lubowicz's reportedly saw the man floundering in the water, rowed to shore and notified police.

Girls Swim to Aid

Two girls, Suzanne Chlapowski, 14, of Webster and her cousin Paula Chlapowski, 16, of Leicester, in another boat further away, swam to Lubowicz's aid. By the time they reached him, he had gone under, but they managed to get him to the surface and tried to get him to their boat.

On shore, Edward Harrington, 16, of Leominster saw the girls struggling and swam out to help.

Held Above Water

The three kept Lubowicz above water until a boat manned by Daniel Gallivan, 16, and John Gallivan, 24, both of Adams, arrived to help.

Harrington applied mouth-to-mouth resuscitation to Lubowicz for 15 minutes without success after they reached shore.

Monday's drowning was the second in the area in about a month involving an Adams man.

Second Victim

An 18-year-old Adams youth drowned in Windsor Pond last month.

Robert Angeli of the Pittsfield state police was investigating the drowning.

Dr. James J. Macek of Adams was called to the scene. State

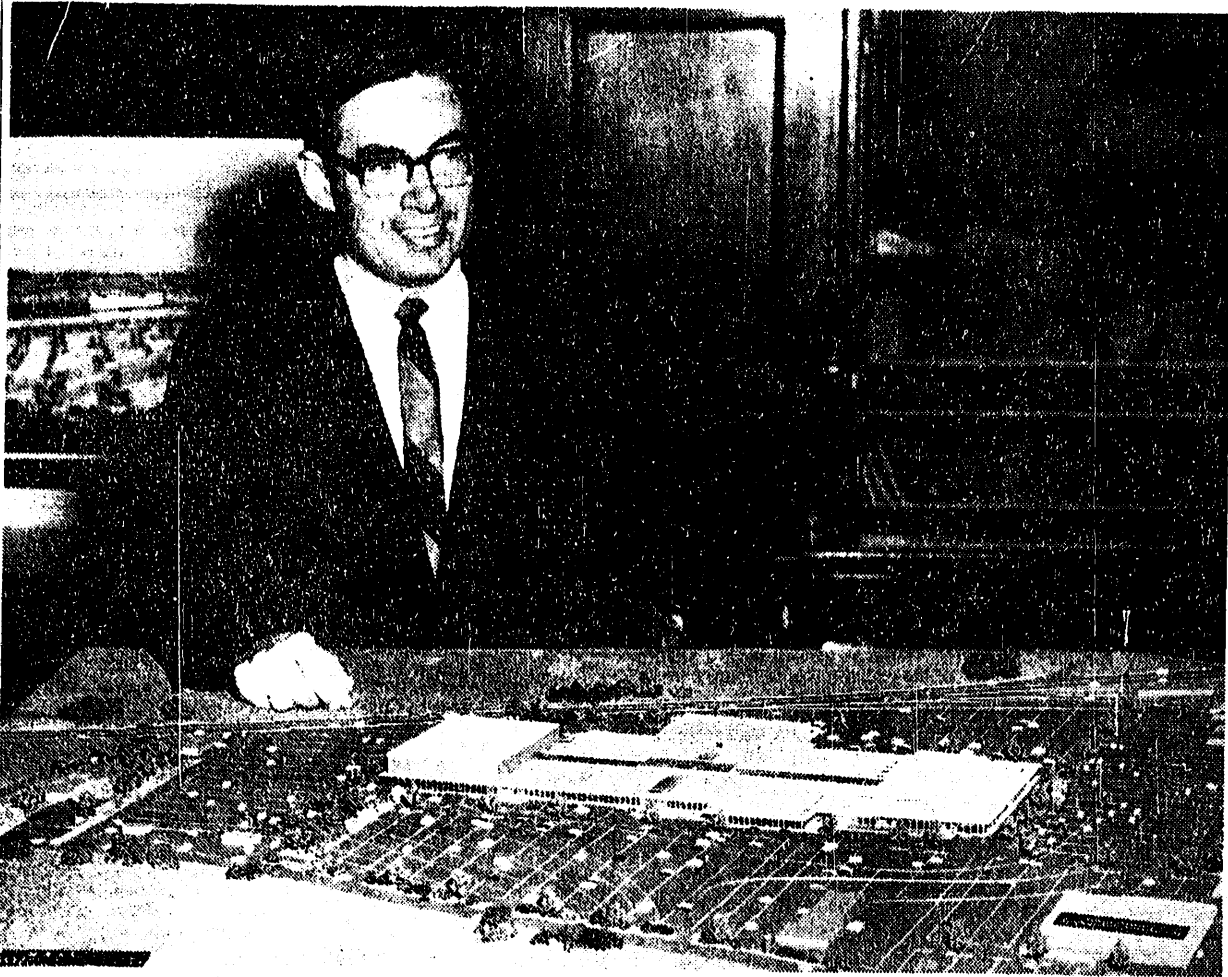

Trooper Robert Angeli used a resuscitator for an hour until the victim was pronounced dead by Dr. Macek.

Mr. Lubowicz was unmarried and was employed as a mechanic at Armstrong's Service Station in Adams. He lived with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William T. Lubowicz, and also leaves a sister, who lives in Washington, D. C. Funeral arrangements are incomplete.

Mayor Gets Glimpse of New Shopping Center

Mayor Ryan looks over a table-mounted scale model of the planned "Springfield Mall" shopping center following a conference in his office Monday with members of the City Council, store officials and Atty. Michael W. Albano of East Longmeadow, developer of the 60-acre tract at Cooley and Allen Sts. Atty. Albano announced that lease agreements had been reached with N. Montgomery Ward & Co., Jordan Marsh Co. and First National Stores. Operations are expected to begin in the $6 to $10 million development sometime after 1967.

Allen St. Shopping Center Plans Hailed As Big Boost to City's Economy

Lease agreements reached with three major tenants of a planned multimillion dollar shopping center at Allen and Cooley Sts. were hailed Monday by Mayor Ryan as a promise of at least 2000 new jobs here and a big boost to the city's economy.

Plans Revealed Building plans at "Springfield Mall" were revealed to the mayor and members of the City Council during a morning conference in City Hall with Atty. Michael W. Albano of East Longmeadow, developer of the 60-acre shopping center.

Atty. Albano, a special justice of the District Court of Southern Berkshire, said leases had been signed with Jordan Marsh Co. and First National Stores. A lease is being drafted, he said, with Montgomery Ward & Co.

Mayor Ryan said later that the three tenants will be in operation sometime after 1967. Nearly 50 other stores also will eventually occupy the $6 to $10 million development, he said.

Parking Facilities Referring to a table-mounted scale model of the development in his office, Mayor Ryan said parking facilities have been planned for about 10,000 cars. The development will include a glass-enclosed, air conditioned promenade, he said.

On the basis of plans outlined by store officials and Atty. Albano, the mayor labeled the project "one of the most significant things that has happened in Springfield in a generation."

Herman Greenberg, president of the Greater Springfield Labor Council, AFL-CIO, when contacted Monday cited the planned shopping center as "a tremendous shot in the arm."

Greenberg said the development will "take up the slack" left in the city's economy and job situation by the recent closing of Carlises.

Comparison Made

Developments like this "add to a community," Greenberg said. Its success so far contrasts sharply to the city's experience with Memorial Industrial Park where "not a single job has been brought in" and two years were "wasted" in fruitless negotiations to relocate John H. Breck, Inc.

Plans by Forbes and Wallace Co. for developing a 50-acre tract across Cooley St. from "Springfield Mall" have apparently been influenced by the lease agreements with two department stores.

Laurence R. Wallace, executive vice-president and general manager, said his firm's plans are "indefinite" for the moment and are under further consideration.

Original plans for the tract included development of about 30 acres to accommodate a group of stores with parking facilities for 1500 to 2000 cars.

According to Cameron S. Thompson, president of Jordan Marsh, his firm does not intend to compete with stores in the downtown central business district. His company plans to construct a four-story building occupying a 250,000 square foot area, he said.

Officials of Montgomery Ward have indicated they will put up a two-story building housing a full line of department store goods on the first floor.

State's First Underground Radio Facility Is Ready

National, state and local Civil Defense officials and governmental officers and military leaders will take part next Monday in the dedication of the state's first completely equipped underground emergency CD broadcasting facility.

Beamed by Telstar The ceremony will be greeted by a message from a prominent national leader beamed here by way of the Telstar satellite.

The state's new $84,000 mobile CD communications unit also will be on display and will demonstrate its potential in reaching all CD installations in the state by two-way radio.

The emergency communications center is located in a fallout shelter in the basement of New WHYN AM and FM radio and Channel 40 television studios at 1300 Liberty St.

Two programs are planned during the dedication so that representatives from all CD offices in 101 cities and towns in the four western counties can attend, as well as the many dignitaries expected.

Announcing plans for the dedication at a luncheon press conference at the Lido Restaurant in Worthington St. Monday Robert J. Boulay, Area 4 CD director, whose territory consists of Hampden, Hampshire, Franklin and Berkshire Counties, said the program will serve as the medium for presenting an "up to the minute report" on the defense posture of this country.

Principal speaker will be William P. Durkee, national Civil Defense director, whose headquarters are at the Pentagon in Washington.

The Telstar greeting will be the highlight of the ceremony, however, Boulay said.

Others to take part in the program will be a representative of Gov. Endicott Peabody, Robert T. Bartley in charge of defense communications at Washington, D. C.; Lt. Col. Leo I. Beinhorn, information services officer at Westover Air Force Base and other Air Force officers; state CDA Director Daniel J. Finn of Framingham and Region I director Laurie J. Cormier of Harvard; Scott Hutchinson, general manager of New England Telephone and Telegraph Co. at Boston; Irving V. Robinson, chief engineer for the Yankee Network at Boston and chairman of the Regional Industrial Advisory Committee for the Emergency Broadcasting System (EBS); and W. C. Swartley, vice-president of WBZ-TV in Brighton.

NORAD Included Arrangements for the Telstar relay were made by Victor P. McDavitt, general defense coordinator for the New England Telephone & Telegraph Co., who also has scheduled a radio transmission directly to WHYN from North American Air Defense Command (NORAD) headquarters at Colorado Springs, Col.

The Telstar relay from Washington will take place between 12:06 and 12:37 p. m., when the satellite will be in position. The second part of the program is scheduled for 4 p. m.

Boulay said that the Emergency Broadcast System (EBS) supercedes the former Conelrad alert system used by the Civil Defense Agency over commercial radio and television stations.

In the event of a national emergency, the CD could cut directly into national networks to broadcast alerts and give essential information.

First Protected Shelter In the WHYN listening area, the new EBS facility there will serve the same purpose, WHYN is the first station in the state to provide underground facilities which would give some protection from blast and fallout in the event of a nuclear detonation in the Springfield area. The shelter was part of the studio addition constructed in 1962.

Representing the station in the program will be General Manager Charles N. DeRose. Working with Boulay on arrangements is Zachary W. Land, assistant general manager.

Notes on the Night Watch

Police Grilling Two Boys In Sixteen Acres Breaks

Police early this morning sought to clear up a rash of breaks that have plagued residents and businessmen of Sixteen Acres during the past three months, they said.

Two juvenile boys were held on open charges after police nabbed them going through a parked car at Allen and Island Pond Rds. late Monday.

By 2 a. m. today, the two had confessed to breaking into four schools, two houses, five cars, a funeral home and endless trips to stores where they pilfered numerous objects.

Det. Nunzio Santaniello and Robert Hibbert working with Sgt. John Santaniello and Det. Dean Clinton of the Youth Aid Bureau were questioning the pair this morning.

Police said at least four more arrests were expected which would clean up countless petty crimes that have occurred in the troubled area.

Actor Says Opera Should Be Sung In Language Audience Understands

"What you write about me will have to be based on what you see on stage because offstage you will find I'm not a very exciting or dashing character," commented Howard Keel, star of the current Storvovton Music Fair production of "Camelot" in an interview with The Union Monday night.

Royalty in Show

If Keel meant that offstage he didn't demand to be treated like royalty, which of course, he is on stage as the lead in the Lerner and Loewe production based on the legend of King Arthur, it undoubtedly was a very accurate summary.

During the interview, which took place in his dressing room 30 minutes before show time, Keel was asked by a parking attendant if he would move his car to a more convenient spot. The well-known Broadway and Hollywood star of such shows as "Kiss Me Kate," "Carousel," and "Oklahoma," flashed a look of momentary exasperation as if he could expect a little more courtesy than this. Then without a word of complaint, he suppressed whatever irritation he might have been feeling and obliged.

In his informal conversation, however, Keel expressed a very deep and sincere interest in concert quite befitting a performer of his stature, and did not at all give the impression of a colorful character.

Many Dynamic Roles Despite his success in such dynamic roles as the star in "Kiss Me Kate," Keel was quite obviously not interested in being a flamboyant character off-stage. He for the most part brushed aside remarks concerning his own personal career and his great success as an entertainer.

On general topics of wide ranging interest, such as the theater, communication with audiences, singing, opera, young people, Keel showed himself to be vitally interested and concerned.

He said that he felt the real worth of musical comedy lay in the fact that it reached and communicated to so many people. He said it had great entertainment value because of this power of drawing a very positive response from the majority of people. Entertaining and communicating to people are obviously two of the strongest motivating forces in Keel's make-up.

Keel said he was also a great proponent of singing in a language native to his audience. He said, for example, he did not believe opera, which he has studied and performed, should be presented in a language which the audience does not understand.

Keel in the direction of musical comedy. Keel prefaced his account of how he became a musical star by saying "it was quite accidental." He said he still has a very great interest in opera and someday might do something along this line.

Show Has "Class"

He said he finds "Camelot" very interesting, full of charm and extremely entertaining. The show, he said, more than others, requires a very excellent supporting cast, and he commented he was currently very fortunate to be working with such a cast.

With a good cast one of the show's most unique qualities becomes possible, and that is, Keel said, that it has "very great class."

Better Test

He remarked that it was a much surer test of whether an actor was conveying the actual emotion and meaning behind his words when the audience could understand what he was singing. Keel said he had witnessed many an inferior acting job covered up by the fact the audience had no idea of what was being sung.

Obviously, his interest in singing in a language common to the audience stems in great part from his desire of communicating and entertaining as fully as possible.

While on the West Coast, Keel sang in English in such well-known operas as "The Barber of Seville," "Carmen" and "The Marriage of Figaro." It was while singing with an opera troupe that he was spotted by the famous lyricist, the late Oscar Hammerstein, who steered

Prior to the performance Monday, Keel spent the weekend in Delaware visiting a summer camp for young singers run by his good friend, Fred Warburg. Keel said he had a grand time and was greatly impressed by the skill and quickness with which the youngsters, all of whom had simply a joy of singing, learned their music. Added to the enjoyment of music and friendship during his weekend visit was the pleasure of driving to the camp in his sports car of which he is exceedingly fond, he remarked.

The Carlises business was founded in 1931 as Homer Foote & Co. It became Carlisle Hardware Co. in 1912 and the name was changed to Carlises shortly after O. W. Siebert purchased the business in 1962.

Siebert attempted to change Carlises from the traditional hardware operation into a diversified department store business. Unprofitable branches were closed, many personnel changes were made and various new lines were added, particularly at the Main St. store.

In May, Pearl announced that he was closing the Main and Thayer St. stores because he could not operate them at a profit, leaving only the Bridge St. and Sixteen Acres stores.
